SEAS IN SEA: EMERGENCE, DEVELOPMENT, REBRANDING AND SUSTAINABILITY OF SOUTHEAST ASIAN STUDIES IN MALAYSIA*

Hanafi Hussin¹ & Mala Rajo Sathian²
¹First author
¹,²Department of Southeast Asian Studies
Faculty of Arts and Social Sciences
¹Institute of Ocean and Earth Sciences (IOES)
²Thai Studies Program
University of Malaya
(hanafih@um.edu.my, malarajo@um.edu.my)

Abstract

This article provides an introductory and brief overview of the research, publications, and achievements of Southeast Asian Studies in Malaysia, in particular, the role of the Department of Southeast Asian Studies at the University of Malaya. It briefly revisits the pre- and post-colonial times, when the subject of Southeast Asian Studies appealed to academics, administrators, and foreign experts. Since 1975, the Department has not only played the role of training young researchers in different issues on Southeast Asia but also provided a platform to local and foreign researchers to publish their scholarly work in JATI-Journal of Southeast Asian Studies and Borneo Research Journals that are both produced by the department annually.

Keywords: Southeast Asian Studies, Department of Southeast Asian Studies, teaching, research, publication.

*an extended paper of Hanafi Hussin (2017) with corrected facts on the history of Southeast Asian Studies Programme at the Department of Southeast Asian Studies, Faculty of Arts and Social Sciences, University of Malaya.

Introduction

In the last decade, Southeast Asian Studies (hereafter SEAS) has witnessed a decline in various universities and institutions in the west. On the other hand,